I like that it [a CWS School Kit] benefits children who don't have supplies or whose families don't have money to buy supplies for school.

The need is all over the world. It's very gratifying to see people helping and people getting the help that they need.

CWS KITS DEPOT VOLUNTEER

CWS is a faith-based organization that deeply believes there is enough in this world for everyone. Born out of a desire to help the most vulnerable after World War II, we form local partnerships to ensure that people everywhere have healthy food, clean water, a safe place to call home and the ability to fulfill their purpose.

More than 75 years later, our mission and approach remain the same— through grassroots initiatives, we inspire the compassion of hundreds of thousands of individuals and organizations, and through sustainable development projects, emergency response activities, advocacy initiatives and refugee support services, we are transforming lives in underserved communities in over 65 countries across the globe.

ADVOCACY & JUSTICE

About 1 in 11 people in this world don't have enough nutritious food to live healthy lives. It doesn't have to be this way.

That's why we focus on making sure that people have the resources they need to thrive. CWS works in partnership with communities and, together, we find permanent solutions to their most urgent challenges.

Whether it's planting gardens, starting businesses or digging wells, our work is a grassroots partnership. Communities give their time and effort. They attend workshops, care for gardens, help with construction and mobilize their neighbors. CWS offers a toolbox of expertise and resources to help them overcome hunger and poverty and meet their goals.

After a catastrophe, the road to recovery can be a long one, and thousands more of our neighbors are walking it each year. We believe that no one should walk it alone.

Our disaster preparedness programs help people make plans and gather supplies long before an emergency. When the worst happens, we're there to help communities recover and rebuild.

During the early days of a tragedy, we focus on the immediate needs for food, water and supplies. When the time is right, we begin long-term recovery. We want everyone to have a safe place to live, clean water access and ways to earn a living. That's why we help rebuild houses, water systems and schools. We also help farmers replant lost harvests and entrepreneurs restart businesses.

When we walk together, more of our neighbors are safe and resilient in the face of crisis.

Everyone deserves a safe place to call home, yet every two seconds, someone is forced to flee their home. Conflict and disaster are displacing people in record numbers.

People on the move often face serious challenges. It can be very hard for them to earn a living, get enough food or even have a safe place to sleep. Building lives without fear and worry can seem like a dream.

We believe that everyone has the right to live in safety and with dignity. CWS programs help people live the lives they want without moving. When staying put is not an option, we protect their safety and dignity while on the move. We also welcome refugees and asylum seekers with open hearts and helping hands as they safely resettle in their new locations.

Everyone deserves a chance to advocate for fair policies that lead to a more peaceful world.

We believe, together, we can impact policies for the better. Our network of advocates work to welcome refugees, end hunger, mitigate disasters and address climate change.

We bring more voices to the table, too. We advocate alongside immigrant and refugee leaders. We lift up the voices of communities around the world living with the impacts of climate change. We work with indigenous groups, older adults, women and girls to amplify their voices.

This movement combines voices from thousands of congregations and individuals. Together, we influence legislators and decision-makers around the globe to create a world where there truly is enough for all.
