

VEGGIES, EGGS AND A SIDE OF HOPE.

Here's what that looks like.

Indonesia is the world's largest island country, with over 13,000 islands. About 28 million Indonesians live in poverty. Where CWS works, 87 percent of households are food insecure.

As many as 39 percent of children under five living in West Timor are underweight. Most households where West Timor programs are located spend about 73 percent of their income on food.

Through the CWS Timor Zero Hunger program, families are raising chickens and starting or expanding vegetable gardens. Both mean better nutrition and a more diverse diet. Within weeks the families will have eggs and vegetables to eat or sell.

Timor Zero Hunger targets six communities, which are home to about 2,500 households or nearly 10,000 people. These communities tend to be in remote and isolated areas with above average poverty levels.

Over 60 young children with severe malnutrition received high-energy milk and nutritious foods at the CWS-supported Therapeutic Feeding Center. Over 300 families with children under five have improved nutrition through the support of chickens and home gardens.

YOUR IMPACT

You're supporting work like this:

$24

Chickens for a family

$15

Seeds for a family garden

$64

Chickens, gardening and clean water access for a family

$150

Rehabilitate 10 malnourished children at the Therapeutic Feeding Center

$5,000

Clean water for 200 families or about 1,000 people